DAILY COURIER.
FRIDAY MORNING, - - - FEB. 21, 1868.

☞ We regret to see that quite a bad state of feeling still exists in Indiana in regard to the recommendation of Pendleton by the late Democratic State Convention. It is asserted in private circles and through the press that those counties which have always given the heaviest Democratic majority, voted against the recommendation.

We also observe that there is much bitter feeling in the discussion of the question in Illinois, and that some twenty odd country papers have taken decided position against Pendleton. The papers have also very generally published a long letter from the distinguished Judge J. D. Catron, in which he declines the Democratic nomination for Governor, and in discussing political matters declares "that Pendleton a nomination will ruin the party."

The Democracy of these two States cannot afford to indulge in any such folly. They can only carry them by united and hearty action, and it is very unfortunate that any disturbing influences have been introduced to jeopard our success on which such momentous results depend. The danger and folly of becoming partisans of any particular candidate is very clearly shown by the irritated feeling in Indiana and Illinois.

☞ Hon. B. C. Ritter passed through the city yesterday on his way to the Frankfort Convention. Mr. R. is now earnestly and heartily co-operating with the Democratic party as the only hope for the country. A contrary impression had been created by his letter published early January, but he never supposed such a construction as was not intended would be placed upon it. The path of duty was clear to him then as now, and he did not hesitate to follow it.

How to Save Fifty Per Cent.

Although the COURIER's advertising rates are fifty per cent. higher than those of any other paper in Kentucky, yet, when circulation—which is the only true standard of value for advertising—is considered, they are more than fifty per cent. cheaper, and our columns daily show that this fact is duly understood and appreciated by the shrewd advertisers of Louisville.

☞ In a card, which will be found in its proper place, it will be seen that our old and esteemed fellow-citizen, Dr. J. W. Knight, puts the name of Charles J. Clarke, Esq., in nomination for Clerk of the Chancery Court. Years ago Mr Clarke was Clerk of that court and performed its duties faithfully and acceptably. He is worthy of the position and no better man could be elected to it.

☞ "All good Democrats" in this city and county were appointed delegates to the Democratic State Convention. All who go to Frankfort for the purpose of attending the convention by paying full fare going will be passed back on the certificate of the Secretary of the Convention without further charge.

The train will leave Frankfort for Louisville at 5:35 Saturday evening—by which hour the convention will probably have adjourned.

☞ If the Democrats of the different wards clubs and the voters don't keep a sharp lookout, a certain interested clique will endeavor to secure the election of such school trustees as will introduce into our schools to the exclusion of our home-made books the series of a Yankee concern which were rejected by the Board last year. The matter should be watched, and any such trickery promptly suppressed.

☞ The letter of "Sidney," which will be found in another column, has, as its date indicates, been on hand for some time. As Mr. Vallandigham has been so violently and unjustly attacked in some papers outside of his own State recently, it is due to him that the views of one of the ablest and purest and truest men in Kentucky should be made public.

Hon. John Young Brown's Speech.

We received by last night's mail, and publish in the COURIER this morning, the able speech of this distinguished gentleman, in defense of his claims to a seat in Congress, of which he has been deprived by Radical-Jacobin malignity and devilry.

☞ Quite a number of delegates to the Democratic State Convention from the southern and western portions of the State passed through the city yesterday, on their way to Frankfort. Among them was Col. John C. Noble, the able and dashing editor of the Paducah Herald.

☞ We will publish to-morrow the speeches of Messrs. Field, Winchester, Baker, and Pfuister, on the death of Helm; and two or three columns of discussions in the Senate, which have been crowded out by Mr. Brown's speech.

☞ The circulation of the COURIER is now more than three times the circulation of any other paper in Kentucky, and it continues to increase with a steadiness and rapidity as gratifying as it is surprising even to us.

Court in Bankruptcy at Frankfort.

Thomas M. Eglinton, Esq., Register, will hold "Court in Bankruptcy" at Frankfort on the 26th and 27th days of this month.

☞ The police bill passed the House of Representatives yesterday, without opposition, and now only requires the signature of the Governor to make it a law.

☞ Several columns of matter in type are unavoidably crowded out this morning, and among others, an admirable letter from Miss Agnes Leonard.

Assault on Mayor Tompert.

Quite an excitement was occasioned yesterday afternoon at about 5 o'clock by an assault made on Mayor Tompert by Policeman Harry Kirby. The particulars of the affair, as gleaned from the statements of the parties who were present, are as follows:

Mayor Tompert and Dr. George Stealey, our City Engineer, went into the St. Nicholas saloon, on the corner of Fifth street and Court Place. They had been invited upon and were conversing with the proprietor of the house, when Policeman Harry Kirby entered. He at once asked Mayor Tompert why he had discharged him from the police? The Mayor made some evasive answer, which was not understood by Dr. George Stealey or the bar-keeper, when Officer Kirby struck him with his fist in the mouth, knocking him down. In falling the Mayor's head struck the floor with great force, producing concussion of the brain, which rendered him insensible for some five minutes. Dr. Forsyth was summoned, and after administering the proper remedies, Mayor Tompert was taken to his home. His lip was slightly cut by the blow, but it is thought by the physicians that he will be able to be up and out this morning.

Mr. Kirby gave himself in custody of an officer, and was taken before Justices Matlock and Clement, who, after hearing the facts, held him in $1,000 bond to answer before the City Court this morning. The affair gave rise to much discussion, in which Mr. Kirby was severely censured. It is known to the public that he was recently discharged from the police force by Mayor Tompert, who acted under advice of the City Council. This led to a ill feeling between them, and while asserting under what he believed to be a great wrong, Kirby was led to an evil moment and while laboring under excitement, to commit an act wholly inexcusable, and which cannot but bring public censure upon him.

A Miraculous Escape.

About 5 o'clock last evening the handsome store of the new firm of Race, Harper & Neal, at the corner of Fourth and Jefferson, was lighted by the presence of a visitor which, for a few minutes, created quite a commotion, not to say consternation, among the numerous purchasers in the establishment at the time. The animal made the round of the store two or three times and the people look so funny in the second story, as the closed sash must doubtless have been, as the colored sign must doubtless have been, as well as the goods, that we could send no troops. Did the Union party approbate that action or not? I held in my hand the address of the Union central committee, to which I made the forcible allusion of this House. It was issued on the 17th of April, 1861. Who signed that address? No unknown or unintellectual men. But there is opposed to it the name of a gentleman who was afterwards Governor Lincoln's Cabinet, the names of two gentlemen, distinguished then and distinguished since as the leading Union editors of the State; and what do they say.

"The Government of the United States has called to her (Kentucky) to furnish men to coerce the revolutionary combinations to the cotton States. She has refused, and we stand firmly and solidly refused. Seditious leaders in our midst have appeal to her to furnish men to uphold those combinations against the Government and the Union. Will she comply with the appeal? Unite she will not comply with it! We answer, with emphasis, no.

"The present duty of Kentucky is to maintain her present independent position, taking steps not with the Government and not with the seceding States, but will fall upon and repel them both, declaring her soil to be sacred from the hostile tread of either, and, if necessary, make the declaration good with her strong right arm. "What is the present duty of Kentucky may be, we of course cannot with certainty foresee; but if the action of the Convention in the proclamation of the President should at any time hereafter assume the aspect of a war for the overthrow and subjugation of the seceding States, Kentucky should promptly maintain her sword in behalf of what will then have become her common cause." Upon the 18th of April a Union convention was held in the city of Louisville, the largest Union convention ever held in that city, or, perhaps, in the State of Kentucky. Little alteration to, on account of the proceedings of that convention, as published in the Louisville Democrat of the succeeding day:

Great Meeting—Kentucky to Stand Neutral in the Union—Hands off on Both Sides—Five Thousand Union Men—Inspired Speeches by Hon. James Guthrie, Ex-Senator Dixon, Hon. John Young Brown, and Judge Bullock—Rousing Meeting of Kentucky.

"One of the grandest and largest public meetings ever held in Louisville took the great court hall of the court-house last night, in response to a call for a meeting of the people to take the proper position for Kentucky, to assume in the present crisis. It was a splendid meeting, both as regards numbers and enthusiasm. It was a glorious attempt and understanding assemblage of the best intelligence of the city, and its effect must be wide and salutary. If the action of the meeting will but respect Kentucky's position and her service all may yet be well, civil war averted, and peace restored. We were more than gratified at the meeting and its works. The Short and Stripes were on both sides of the speaker's stand, and were frequently cheered as allusions to the National banner were made.

My attention has been called upon a letter dated April 18, 1861. I will read that letter:

LITTLETOWN, April 18, 1861.

To the Editor of the Louisville Courier:

My attention has been called to the following paragraph which appeared in your paper of the date:

JOHN YOUNG BROWN'S POSITION. This gentleman, in reply to some querying Secessionists, who put questions to him in Hardin, said, he would adhere to the call of the President for four regiments of volunteers to march against the South.

I never said any such thing, and I defy any one to show that I ever did. On the contrary, I declared that I would not vote a dollar or a man for the purpose of coercing the seceding States.

The State Military Debt.

During the last session of the Legislature a movement for the partial extinguishment of the State debt was accomplished by the veto of Helm.

The resources of the Sinking Fund were increased in divers ways, to provide a fund for the immediate payment of the State bonds.

Among other measures the funds received from the United States on military account were transferred from the "Military Fund" on the ledger of the State Treasurer, and put into the "Sinking Fund" account.

This was done under the manifest impression that the military indebtedness of the State had been fully and completely paid. So far from such being the fact, some $17,000 of ascertained indebtedness is still outstanding and unpaid.

We have seen the Quartermaster returning checks for some of these debts. They are checks signed by the Governor and Quartermaster General, and addressed to the Auditor. Now the Auditor has but one reason for not paying these checks. It is that the "military fund" is a blank page on his books. All the funds received from Washington city will go into a channel never contemplated in the arrangement between the State and the Federal Government, and that for such diversion of fund the checks would long ago have been paid.

It is a fact that our State credit has been so exercised that the public creditor is compassioned current as money, not one even doubting their prompt payment by the State. We have a person not known to credit now to the checks have been sent as money to purchase property.

Some measure of relief proper to such unmerited injustice, to provide for the payment of these checks. The parties had receipted in full to the State for the amount of their claims, and instead of money have only received these checks. It is true that the State presents these receipts and counter-signatures upon them at Washington and instead of paying the holders of the checks put the money into the sinking fund, and the claimants are left with receipts and checks in their hands to waste for their money.

Common justice, it seems to us, demands that the funds received from Washington should be restored to the military fund at least to an amount sufficient to pay the military checks of the State, and we trust our legislators will see the force of the proper action to be had in the premises.

The Capitol Extension Proposition.

Yesterday, at 12 M., was the hour appointed for action upon the motion to reconsider the vote by which the House rejected the bill making an appropriation of $300,000 for capitol extension at Frankfort, but no action was had upon the motion to reconsider. One of the minds ran and the House resolution taking up the whole morning. We have too much confidence in our legislators to entertain any serious apprehension that they will vote an appropriation from the public treasury intended to fix the seat of government at Frankfort and commence the erection of new and extensive public buildings there. Even were there no other reason for opposing the appropriation—and there are others of great importance—this is no time for lavish expenditure of the public money. The people require prudent and economical legislation.

☞ Our Washington special states that the President thinks the recent movement of Congress for the unconditional admission of Alabama was a virtual acknowledgment that the Congressional power of reconstruction is a grand failure, and says the last ought to have been admitted long ago and the States restored to their political rights. Now, it is true enough that the States ought long since to have been restored to their political rights, but the proposition to remove the failure by bringing the ten States in under mere constitutions by a sweeping act of Congress we know is not such restoration as commends itself to Mr. Johnson. We are afraid the acknowledgment of failure to work prove of much service to the country.

Passage of the Militia Bill.

The bill to organize the militia of the Commonwealth passed the House by a large majority yesterday as it was reported from the Military Committee except that the Treasurer left for the salaries of officers were stricken out. It establishes a complete and well devised system of militia organization. The few opponents of the measure did their utmost to the way of disbursing to prevent its passage, but their efforts were in vain. The bill will doubtless pass the Senate.

Resolutions on the Death of Governor Helm.

Appropriate resolutions were adopted yesterday with reference to the death of Governor Helm, by each House of the General Assembly. Fitting and eloquent tributes were paid to his memory in the Senate by Messrs Field, Winchester, and Baker, and in the House by Messrs. Pirtle, McAfee, and Head. Both Houses adjourned over to-day on the passage of these resolutions.

☞ The Democratic National Committee met in Washington to select a place and name a time for holding the National Democratic Convention on Saturday the 22d. The following named gentlemen constituted committee as organized at Chicago in 1864:

Card from Judge J. Hop Price.

To the Editor of the Louisville Courier:

Several communications done to the city papers from my friends in regard to Electors for the Circuit Court Judgeship, that may induce the belief on the part of that I desire the position, I deem it due to me to say myself in my present official capacity. I would like to continue the district, and decline the great honor tendered which the people so kindly proffer.

I am thankful to my friends for their kindness of the position, but feel better to be a candidate before the democracy.

J. HOP PRICE.

Card from Mr. Louis Helm.

To the Editors of the Louisville Courier:

Will you please state that I am not a candidate for the office of the Court of Appeals, nor a member of the Board of Commissioners which has been created by the late act of the Legislature.

BRAYFOGLE, JR., ON THE WING.

His First Letter to the Memphis Appeal.

How "Bray." Roped the Boys of Louisville.

We have already given the particulars of the arrest of one L. H. Fould, at the Louisville Hotel, on a dispatch received at that office from Memphis. Mr. Fould, who writes under the name de plume of "Brayfogle, Jr." arrived in our city in the early part of the week. Being a young man of good address and tremendous appetite, he soon struck up a couple of acquaintances, who tendered to him the freedom of the city. It being understood that he was the "special correspondent of the Memphis Appeal," he was duly presented to the editorial fraternity of Louisville by each of whom he handed his card. "Bray" (as we will call him for short) toasted his cane, and looked through his gold spectacles the very embodiment of literary wisdom. Like the rest of us he was paper-chasing, so he was pleased to term it. "Bray" was not to be outdone in diverse to taking a drink when invited. It is through thoughtfulness, perhaps, the idea of reciprocating now and then occurred to him during a brief but eventful career in this city. This time, however, was a small matter and never remembered by the "good fellows" and he did not call at the house of his acquaintance Mr. Hackett during his town.

It being suggested that a "drink was on the wine" at Gilmore's, he was introduced into the ceremony by the reverend gentleman, who was so impressed with him that one of them awaited him at the door of proceeding the talented correspondent with a "D. H." ticket to Chicago. It must be borne in mind by our readers that Mr Brayfogle and Horace Greely were both stopping at the Louisville Hotel, and as a matter of course, these two distinguished journalists were introduced. Bray and Horace paced up and down the floor of the front office after dinner, arm in arm, puffing their fragrant Havanas and discussing the great questions of the day. The guests were very much perplexed to know which was Horace and which was "Bray." In the general guessing "Bray" had the call on Horace, and was pointed out as the great philosopher of the Tribune. They became quite attached to each other, and "Bray" took occasion to introduce his friend Horace to the Louisville boys, who appreciated the compliment. This of course elevated "Bray" several degrees higher in the estimation of his friends and as poor Artemus Ward would say, "they wanted to know him more on the spot." The cards at the office of the hotel for Mr Brayfogle Jr. were altogether too numerous to mention. Two or three were kept in constant motion between Bray's room and the cashier's desk. As "Bray" says in the following letter to the Appeal, Majesty and the beauty of the crowd were at right. Bray remembers an invitation from the retired commissary to call on the night previous to the departure of Mr. Brayfogle, Jr. for Chicago, quite a delegation called upon him and he was treated in various and sundry bumpers chiefly at the expense of his young and gallant friend—nature's nobleman. With many fond adieus, they parted, and the bedazzled Bray "turned in" and "went to sleep" to lay down to pleasant dreams." At about half past 10 o'clock a representative of the city called at his room and insisted upon Bray's accepting the hospitalities of the city. He was shown to the "purple room" of Castle Thomas, where he was a requisition from the Governor of Tennessee. The following from the Memphis Appeal is the key to the foregoing.

A SNUBBLER ON THE WING—STOP HIM.—We were very much astonished to learn from a gentleman, who had just arrived from Louisville, that as a jubilee and corresponding of the Appeal was parading the streets and doubling up the hospitalities of the Louisville Hotel, he had taken to himself envelope were received from Louisville containing two thick half sheets of letter paper, and the other the hollow of both.

"LOUISVILLE, Feb 18, 1868

"Editors Memphis Appeal:

"I am on the wing, and time getting here by way of Nashville. Met our young and genial friend, C. T. Cogbrun, one of nature's noblemen. Mumy and the balance of the crowd of the Louisville are all right. You will hear from me and I trust this. Yours,

BRAYFOGLE, Jr.

Being the case it was signature as L. H. Fould. No such individual or any other is known to treason the aberration of the Appeal. We shall soon have any correspondent whom we may authorize to act in his name, and we are ever ready to expose an unwarranted use of our name. It is the health has spoken of [illegible] and in fact of every thing there is to [illegible] will not permit us at this writing to speak of more at length, but we strongly request all who appreciate talent, wit, humor, music and, in short, a regular variety entertainment to attend to-night. Even a performance was never before witnessed in Louisville.

DISAGREEABLE STEAMBOAT AFFAIR.—A serious difficulty occurred at about half past eleven o'clock on Wednesday night on Main street between Fourth and First between the Monongahela and Aleghaney packets on the river. We are informed that the difficulty originated over an old feud. Both parties drew knives, and but each other in different places. Last accounts of the wounds of Scales is quite serious. No policemen were about, or if they were, they failed to either avert the difficulty or arrest the parties.

TAYLOR CHAMBER.—The concert last night was attended by a select audience and the programme throughout was admirably rendered. It is very much the intention of the managers to give concerts preceding an elaborate ball. We trust that it will be repeated at an early day.

THE RIGHT SPIRIT.—The Democrats of Kentucky are making every effort to secure the election of a Democratic Governor this year. They have nominated Hon. John C. Breckinridge, and are determined to elect him. Let the Democrats of Jefferson county do their whole duty, and the result is certain.

THE BANQUET TO-NIGHT.—The banquet to-night at the Louisville Hotel promises to be a very brilliant affair. Many distinguished gentlemen from abroad are in the city, and will be present. Among them are Hon. Thomas Ewing, Hon. Geo. H. Pendleton, Hon. Wm. Allen, Hon. Geo. W. Julian, Hon. Schuyler Colfax, Hon. Wm. D. Kelley, Hon. Wm. Lawrence, Hon. Wm. Higby, Hon. Wm. Mungen, Hon. Wm. Wilkinson, Hon. Wm. Eames, Hon. Wm. Wood, Hon. Wm. Dennison, Hon. Wm. Cullen Bryant, Hon. Wm. Cullen, Hon. Wm. Cullen, Hon. Wm. Cullen
